AS WE HEARD IT

From a recent issue of Collier's Weekly:

"A New York detective agency that specializes in tracing missing persons has been employed by more than 70,000 wives to find their missing husbands, but only 15 husbands to find their wives."

Confucius would probably have something to say about this!

Historians say that women used cosmetics in the Middle Ages. For that matter, women in the middle ages still use them.

OVERHEARD IN KRESGE ELEVATOR ON JANUARY'S COLDEST DAY:

"Was over to Jones Beach yesterday."

"What! Don't tell me there's still swimming over there in this weather!"

"Oh, no: I was over visiting my sister who lives near there."

"Well, you got nothing on me. I'm going to the World's Fair tomorrow."

"Don't be wise; the Fair's closed."

"I know, but I'm driving my mother over to a cemetery a mile away!"

Boss: "How long do you want to be away on your honeymoon?"

Co-worker: "Er-- how long would you suggest?"

Boss: "How do I know? I haven't seen the bride."

Test of will power: eat one salted peanut and leave the rest.
